

5 tricky interview questions

Everyone, who has ever tried to get a job know that a terrible word — interview. These unclear issues, my chair banged his pen on the table and feel like you came to take the exam but got the wrong door and ended up on the delivery of the diploma. And now these strange people you have something you want. Today we publish five of the most controversial and common questions applicants and advise how to best answer this question.

What is your biggest weakness?

Oh, my most “favorite” question. So I want to ask, what does this have to do with my post. Especially if I, for example, an electrician. This question has stumped more than one applicant, and I, too, was no exception. The disadvantages? Well, let's say, I click a pen and pencil chewing. How it hurt me?

With this answer, of course, little seems, why is HR generally asks that. In fact, it is important not so much your response as your response, or rather the ability or inability to critically assess himself. In any case, answering this question do not forget that you have to show your strengths. Therefore, we can say that in the first half of the day you're not working too cheerfully, and after dinner, opened a “second wind”.

What kind of wages you would like to?

Also a trick question. Call less think value yourself, call more — I would say that overreach. What to do?

In order to properly answer this question, you have to do the preliminary work. Find out how much your city get people is your specialty, and how many are representatives of this position in that particular company.

What amount of from the minimum value to the maximum, for example:
“At this stage I am willing to from 250 to 400 dollars”.

If the interviewer wants specifics — call it write my essay 4 me discount code the average salary in your area in this company.

Who do you see yourself in 3-5 years?

It is a difficult question. The worst option is to answer “I don't know.” Remember, the words “I don't know” should not be at the interview. A good friend of mine, who works as a HR in IT company shared with me an interesting answer, which sounded one candidate for the position of PHP programmer:

“I see myself developing and sought-after expert in companies similar to yours”.

Yes, maybe it's flattery. But the guy took it, and the answer really is difficult to fault. But still possible, so always be ready to parry.

Why did you leave your last place of work?

“Dangerous” question, because the interviewer gives you quite a few wiggle room. This question is with a simple purpose — to check whether to complain the person on the previous boss. In this case, the worst thing you can do is to start talking about what all was bad, and they will not understand. Tell me how is.

Why you? (Or “Why us?”)

This issue also requires additional training. If you ask why they should choose you — prepare for this question in advance and select 4-5 paragraphs of the summary, which prove that you are an excellent candidate for this position.

If you wonder why you chose our company, tell us about that looked at a few potential candidate companies, and this seemed the most appealing to you.